With admiration and gratitude to President Trump for his historic achievement in bringing peace to the Middle East—at a time when public opinion feared the outbreak of a Third World War—we, the Cyrus Force of the USA and “Payrowan Kourosh” of Iran, along with our construction arm in the United States, CHAMCO, would like to offer a suggestion.

Today, reports from Iran speak of a severe water shortage, with public demonstrations even taking place in Esfahan over the lack of drinking water.

As a prudent and humanitarian gesture, we propose that during the upcoming negotiations with Iran, the United States—along with the cooperation of other nations—offers, in exchange for Iran giving up its nuclear program, to help supply millions of cubic meters of water from the Persian Gulf to Iran’s central valley, and to invest up to several trillion dollars in this ambitious infrastructure project.

CHAMCO has previously presented similar proposals. Today, one of our associates inside Iran has reached out to ask: would President Trump, now recognized globally as a man of peace, consider supporting this project—one that could capture the hearts and minds of the Iranian people as a sign that he truly wants to Make Iran Great Again?

With respect,

Cyrus Force
